HOW TO PLAY SPEECH & MOVE LIBS!

DIRECTIONS:

Add some fun into your articulation practice by using these speech sound/movement cards.

Print out the movement cards that are related to your sound. Cut them out and mix them into a pile. Then, practice your sound in connected speech by reading the story aloud. When you get to a fill in the blank, pick a card from the pile. Read the card aloud, and then do the movement! Once completed, place the card face up and continue reading the paragraph. Put your movement cards in order from the first one you did in the story all the way to the last one at the end of the story.

After you complete the story and all of your movements, retell the story using the movement cards. Focus on producing clear sounds while using the movement cards as reminders. Once you retell the story and have produced all the sounds to the best of your ability, make a movement chain doing all of the movements in a row.

TIPS AND TRICKS:

Start by doing movements 1x each. If that's too easy do the movement 5x, and continue to build in more.

If you are only working on your sound in one specific position (initial-beginning, medial-middle, final-end), only focus on practicing that sound. Continue to build in more positions of the sound as it becomes easier.

After you finish, focus on all of the sounds, and repeat them 3 or more times.

A cheap and easy way to laminate the cards is to use packing tape.
